REMEMBER, REMEMBER!

Celebrated annually in Great Britain on November 5th, Guy Fawkes night is a good excuse for some mischievous fun, but it also commemorates an important event in British history. In the year 1605 a group of men, led by Robert Catesby, plotted to kill King James by blowing up Parliament. On November 5th the plot failed when one of the conspirators, Guy Fawkes, was discovered hiding with 36 barrels of gunpowder underneath the House of Lords. The familiar rhyme "Remember, remember, the fifth of November" keeps this centuries-old story alive.
